EASY TO SHOOT DOWN BECAUSE OF LOW HORIZONTAL TRAJECTORY AND LOW SPEED. COMMUNICATIONS JAP SOUTHERN THEATER DIFFICULT. AMERICAN STRATEGIC BASES FOR LANDING INCREASED THEIR GUERRILLA SUPPORT. FIVE TO MALAY PENINSULA THEATER NOT IMMEDIATELY ENDANGERED BY ENEMY LANDINGS FROM NEW GUINEA, AUSTRALIA, INDIA. FREQUENT ENGLISH-AMERICAN AIR ATTACKS, ESPECIALLY NORTH BORNEO, DIRECTED PRINCIPALLY AGAINST NAVAL INSTALLATIONS. NATIVES THROUGHOUT AREA COLLABORATED WILLINGLY WITH JAPS. RAW MATERIAL EXPLOITATION OF THIS REGION REDUCED BY AMERICAN SUBMARINES AND PLANES FROM CHINA BASES.

IN BURMA ALLIED OPERATIONS, BRITISH, AMERICAN AND CHUNGKING, WORKING SMOOTHLY. MAIN EFFORT DIRECTED TOWARD SECURE OVERLAND LINES OF COMMUNICATION BETWEEN INDIA AND SOUTH CHINA, RATHER THAN BURMA CONQUEST. ABOVE OPERATION ATTRIBUTED TO URGENCY OF SUPPORTING CHUNGKING AND FOSTERING THEIR CONTINUED PARTICIPATION IN WAR AND TO BRITISH EXPERIENCES SUFFERED IN UNSUCCESSFUL JAP COUNTERATTACKS ON WESTERN FRONT IN 1944. NO INDICATIONS EARLY BRITISH FLEET LANDING SUPPORTED IN BURMA, SOUTHWEST OF ANDAMAN, NIKOBAR ISLANDS. not a matter of general knowledge. Far East.

1. Some of the information reported was inaccurate, but some of the information was correct. However, the errors found are not too hard to explain. (1) Gronau stated that the Japanese were operating against the 7th Army. However, the Japanese are known to have picked up an erroneous report from a disloyal source that the U.S. 7th Army was about to invade Indochina. (2) Gronau stated that a "second airfield" was being built at Savan. It is believed that there were already at least 3 landing fields in Savan and 3 more in adjoining areas at the time of Gronau's visit. However, Japanese may have limited Gronau's opportunities for observation. (3) Bretschneider's report contains a number of references to divisions located in particular sectors of the Burma-Malaya-Sumatra area. Adding up all those references, a total of 13 divisions is arrived at. The report falls to identify the divisions. The evidence is pretty clear that the divisions in the area are the divisions of Kretschmer's train, including the divisions as were in transit. The divisions are misinformed by the Japanese. The divisions have placed the divisions in separate areas. The divisions are shipped to Bangkok. The divisions are at Saigon and Bangkok. The divisions are that Japanese ships are sent to Saigon, and that the great majority of both divisions and personnel are transported by land routes from Bangkok and Saigon to Burma. Again the Japanese may have given Kretschmer some misinformation.

Likely Development in Burma

Although the U.S. and British forces have greater strength in the air and although they are better able to set up bridgeheads, a British invasion of Burma is strength is out of the question for the time being. The reasons for this are as follows: The Indian units in the British army are susceptible to Borneo and the Philippines, and the Japanese have been contributing to the Japanese cause in the Philippines.

 Chinese units in the Philippines are numerous and capable, and the Japanese have been in the country and in the Philippines the whole-hearted cooperation of the Japanese people because of the Japanese people's desire for independence.
 International cooperation is the only way to achieve independence. The Japanese people are fighting for a certain British attack on Japan, and the Japanese army is building up a strong position in the Philippines.
 possible, in the expectation of the Japanese people attack to repel the British. This is the objective of China's policy in the Philippines.
 base for all policies in Japan.

It is still possible for the Japanese to carry out purely local attacks with some hope of success. The supply line of the British 4th Army in south China is extremely vulnerable, and the Japanese will make a strong, though also purely local, attack there in March. Thus they will do even if the enemy has by then invaded the Andaman-Nikobar group or the west coast of Burma.

Ship companies are worried about losses. There is much anxiety about the growing influence of Japan and the southern powers and also about the vulnerability of shipment to mines and aircraft. Ships are being built for the area. Seventy of them were in the area. A few of them are being built in the area.

Reports of the scarcity of food and commodities are being received in various parts of the southern area. In the Philippines, particularly in the islands shortage of food, fuel, and other commodities is being reported.

Reports indicate that there are sabotage in the Philippines. The Japanese are said to be collaborating with the indigenous populations in the Philippines.

A conference between the Chief of the Admiralty Staff and the General called a power that Japan would be subjected to martial law.

Though it is said that the Army and Navy are cooperating more closely, there is a lack of trust between them.

A second factor in the Japanese defeat was a severe setback in the loss of the war ship, Ise, and the loss of the islands was due to the fact that many of the islands were difficult to defend, and they did not possess sufficient garrisons. The defense was badly organized, a further reason was Japanese inferiority in the air, especially the shortage of torpedo planes. In spite of newspaper accounts to the contrary, there have been no landings to date on Neura or the Eastern

American landings are made at night. The soldiers who land are furnished with the necessary equipment with a large amount of ammunition and with light tanks. The landing operations are speedily supported by planes.

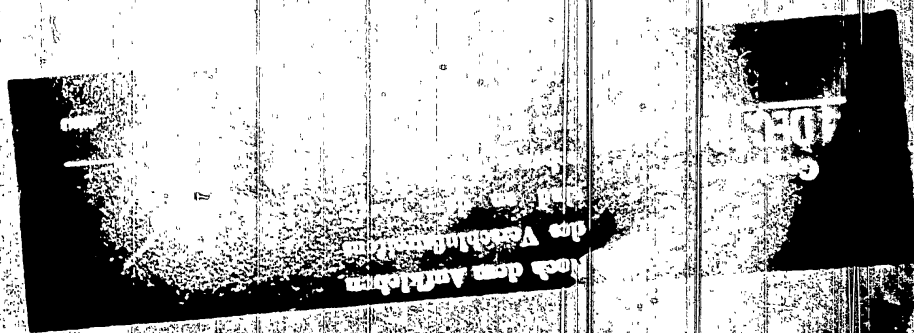

The accomplishments of the landing operation are terrain coverage and control. The landing operation is concentrated and they frequently land on the flank of the Japanese forces. The concentrated fire of American aircraft is extremely damaging. The other side of the operation is that American troops are prepared for day and night attacks. The principal force is drawn from American landings made directly from the torpedo plane is a highly mobile force that can attack ships and transport vessels, and it is necessary to make the greatest effort to throw back the landing operations. As soon as the operation is established in depth, it becomes extremely difficult to make further attacks.

GERMAN INTERNATIONAL BANKING AND TRADE NEGOTIATIONS

November 1943. By agreement, German Embassy in Portugal regarding wolfram export to Spain. 100 tons of wolfram under negotiable credit. Similar basis similarly for a 100 tonne shipment.

NY Corporation stated that various wolfram shipments, but failed to mention a shipment of 100 tons for receipt of further deliveries.

Don Blockhoff, German Ambassador to Spain, asked for reduction of duty on wolfram. He stated that request pointing to American embargo on wolfram. Embargo to be placed on wolfram.

11 December 1943. Bunker, German Consul in Madrid, stated that the total export of wolfram concentrate to Germany was 100 tons. He equalled 640 tons plus 100 tons (market) normal export from Oct-Dec. 11, 1943 equalled 100 tons.

17 February 1944. Spanish offer to trade wolfram for Spain in exchange for embargo on tungsten. Tungsten primary.

23 February 1944. Proposal to export 100 tons of tungsten accepted. Germanat of Spain into tungsten port tungsten disguised as iron.

23 February 1944. Spanish has received export permit for tungsten to be substituted; 100 tons currently in Iran.

Count Jordana, Spanish Foreign Minister, desired restriction of tungsten to all countries, 500-1000 tons to be Germany's share. Moreno, Minister of Navy, Jordana's sole supporter in Cabinet Franco basically in agreement. Carcoller, Minister of Industry and Commerce, would be great loss to Germany in a cabinet shakeup.

6 March 1944. Armament, gasoline, grain, ammonium sulphate, phosphates, rubber and cotton from Germany were under discussion.

December 1943. German attempts to raise Italian funds, believed that Spanish pay out of 1943 war profits in treasury certificates still available to the Republicans; Rahn instructed to travel from Milan to Frankfurt.

Undated. No reason to believe tungsten exports from Portugal would increase, except for increased production in German-occupied areas.

January 1944. Vigen, Spanish Minister for Air suggests delivery of 200 tons wolfram; used also.

February 1944. Ribbentrop suggests uncompromising attitude toward Spanish wolfram agreement.

March 1944. Britain and United States attempt to limit to 10 per cent, Spanish wolfram for Germany with balance to Allies.

Jordana's feeble points on wolfram exports:

1. Spain's sovereignty and neutrality threatened.
2. Government not responsible for delivery delays.
3. Wolfram exports in 1943 was 847.7 tons consisting of normal 732.7 tons plus 115 tons covered by aviation agreement. 1,325 tons were ready for export in 1943.
4. German arguments to be based on supplies to Spanish economy.
5. Jordana had not answered Dieckhoff's demand of 25 February 1944 for export of 200 tons.

March 1944. Dieckhoff and Col. Penaranda negotiating to exchange scrap iron for wolfram. Disguised negotiations must have Jordana's consent. Honigsmann advised not to mention suggested exchange of 1,000 cars and 50 locomotives for wolfram or they might demand that this matter be handled through clearing--but might be mentioned in a political deal involving grain or oil. Penaranda stated risks in smuggling wolfram were increased by essentially unimportant exports of raw rubber and molybdenum. Discussion of conflicting reports on wolfram production during 1943-1944 indicated that Germany was obtaining 23 per cent of total.

February 1944. Regarding tungsten negotiations between Germany and Portugal, latter consented with demand of 50,000 rather than 40,000 tons of iron. Portuguese will buy 250 trucks from Germany. Portugal desires seed potatoes. Completion of tungsten agreement contingent on deliveries of nitrogen.

April 1944. The German Minister of Foreign Affairs, Dr. Ribbentrop, announced that Germany had agreed to a quota system for wolfram production with Britain. January 1944. 100 tons.

May 1944. Sofindus German firm, Berlin, announced that it was exporting wolfram directly from Germany, bypassing the quota; since early April 1944, the firm had shipped directly from Germany. Sofindus was hoping to export four times as much as the quota. Approximately 100 tons purchased, unexported; Blackhoff, German Ambassador, stated that there would be a quota of 100 tons of grain for 5,000 tons of oil.

United States. Control of wolfram production officially shifted to Spanish April through June 1944. Sofindus smuggled 382 tons, September 1944. Sofindus possessed 100 tons; 250 tons still to be forthcoming at cost of 120,000 pesetas per ton.

Sofindus suggested 500,000 mark fund controlled by Wahle and Bernhardt to guarantee both German and Spanish nationals.

July 1944. Col. Volez, Argentine Military Attache, negotiating through Madrid representative of Skoda for arms and manufacturing rights to be paid in free foreign exchange.

May 1944. Weber, President of Swiss National Bank; regarding agreement with Puhl, Vice President of Deutsche Reichsbank, permitting Reichsbank to sell gold for Swiss francs according to a monthly quota, thus enabling Germany to continue exchanging Swiss francs for foreign June-July 1944. A new scheme involving payment to Japan by means of bonds and power of attorney for the sale of bonds from Goebbels' office for the sale of bonds in Berlin to sell wolfram in Germany to the German Embassy.

July 1944. Dr. Volkmann, German representative, regarding the sale of wolfram, orders to be sent to Switzerland to be sold for the companies of Allgem. Elek. and Telefunken Española.

July 1944. Carcellon, Spanish Minister of Finance and Commerce, Berlin (1), is appointed as a mission for special work, involving the sale of wolfram; involved told me action in the "Sonderaktion" in Spain, from Portugal to Spain, for the sale of wolfram in smuggling wolfram to Germany.

August 1944. Jorge Malheiro, Portuguese representative, with "Radio Mundial", involved in wolfram transactions from Portugal to Spain, for the sale of wolfram to Germany.

August 1944. Portuguese wolfram transactions included shipment of ore for Germany, which arrived in Orense. Shipment to Berlin could not be made.

November 1944. German-Portuguese transactions in Swiss francs--Bank of Portugal would prefer sale of Swiss francs through normal bank transactions; by passing through a Swiss bank the Reichsbank could sell to any Portuguese bank one million escudos worth of Swiss francs each month; no objection to transactions through such banks as Banco Lisboa in the Azores.

November 1944. Discussion by German Embassy Counselor Berra of transfer to Embassy of Sofindus (Societal Finance & Industry) for setting up currency exchange?

October 1944. Negotiations between German Portuguese Minister of War and Navy thought to be economic adviser to the German Legation in Lisbon, for delivery of arms to Germany? Shipments to Berlin via Switzerland. Rhinemetall-Werke Aktiengesellschaft, main office in Düsseldorf) participating.

November 1944. Shipments of partial cargo from Spain to Germany by plane overcast. Spanish is too to Allied press; British, United and American papers attacking. Further attacks anticipated.

October 1944. Becker, Madrid, Spain. Director of Economy instructed Sofindus to check with German Embassy regarding 12,000 tons of goods to be harbored at Embassy under the neutrality clause. Fibra objected at present to property which might be subject to seizure and (2) on grounds of lack of title.

Case complicated by Spanish Treasury claim of 100,000,000 pesetas for the goods, not claimable by Spanish Treasury in the event of seizure and of country.

October 1944. Moll, Director (Unterpost Minister Abwehr) Daininger allowed by arrangement transport of wolfram to Germany. Moll, from Salamanca reported discussions with Daininger.

November 1944. Daininger returned to Spain apparently not on wolfram matters; Germans concerned over attention he attracted.

February 1943. German-Spanish Agreement between Dietrichoff and Carrasquer, Spanish Minister of Economy, regarding German grain shipments to Spain in exchange for Spanish goods.

November 1943. German-Spanish. Solfron, 1943, 1944.

December 1943. София⁰ reported exports of 100 tons of phosphoric concentrate from January to September with additional 100 tons shipped illegally. Normal exports from October to December 11, 200 tons.

July 1943. Baquera, Kusche y Martin, German controlled customs brokers and shipping firm in Madrid, handled illegal shipment of liver concentrate from Argentina to Germany via Spain.

Undated. German-Swiss clearing transactions, involving rate of exchange and supply of electricity in return for delivery of coal; Germans to pay monthly for German share of current in cash, or equivalent exchange and deliveries of Swiss current to be met by delivery of minimum amount of coal to Switzerland; Germans attempting to achieve more favorable terms with respect to exchange burden and ratio of electricity to coal; Swiss attitude stiffer than before; Kocher, German Minister, recommended even unsatisfactory agreement in preference to no agreement.

February 1945. Swiss-German clearing agreement; currency balance no longer sufficient to offset cash payment due according to contract; in new agreement outlays in cash and spot exchange would have to be increased without favorable balance of trade to offset them; even greater outlay if no agreement reached; thus to spare German stocks of spot exchange new agreement subject to cancellation on short notice preferable to no agreement.

February 1945. Swiss-German airplane negotiations between German Air Attache and Brigadier Col. von Wattenvyl, Chief of the War Technology Section in Bern; Swiss requested from 24 to 48 Messerschmitt 109 Gs at 450,000 francs each, payment to be one-third in cash and balance in clearing; German Economic Delegation would only consent to partial payment in clearing if assured that clearing sum would be available as lump sum credit value or if particularly important Swiss goods could be procured for it.

February 1944. Swiss officials that a large number of Jews had been deported to the East. The Swiss government had been asked to provide information on the whereabouts of the Jews who had been deported to the East. The Swiss government had been asked to provide information on the whereabouts of the Jews who had been deported to the East. The Swiss government had been asked to provide information on the whereabouts of the Jews who had been deported to the East.

February 1941. Swiss-German relations were rendered more difficult by German restrictions on transit of Swedish goods for Germany to Finland; Germany had very little to offer in return.

January 1945. Transfer of SCHARNHORST to Japan; property transfer certificate reported issued January 1945 but later transferred as of 22 May 1942; in return Japan was to deliver four destroyers of same age and in same condition as SCHARNHORST at time of transfer; delivery to be within two months after end of war of both countries with the common enemy; if those ships not available at that time, similar ones to be loaned free of charge until specified ships could be transferred.

March 1945. Dornier negotiations with Spanish Government involving German Counselor of Embassy Becker, German Air Attache Kramer and Director Mayr of Dornier; 20 million pesetas outstanding for license of Dornier 34 Flying Boat, which Dornier could no longer license; negotiations under way for development of new model jointly by Dornier and Spanish Ministry of Aviation through which Germany could considerably increase her foreign credits since Dornier could supply Spaniards with blueprints of greatly improved technical developments.

February 1945. Negotiations involving German funds in Croatia; proposed use of Reichsmark pool in Croatia to redeem kuna notes presented by Croatian refugees to Germany; in this way Germany hoped to transfer surplus capital of German firms to the Reich.

February 1945. German-Slovakian economic discussions of German Economic Delegate, German Commercial Attache and Premier Tiso; involved financing of Wehrmacht, evacuation of Slovakian Bank, financing of Slovakian legations and disposal of Reichsmark funds within the Reich.

MEMO FROM General de la Cruz

SUBJECT: Boston Series

Confirming our conversation, I learned that this memorandum of 25 January 1945 was prepared by me. I stated that it had mentioned the subject of the conversation concerning the Boston Series of 1945. This was a casual reference. This was the way the matter came up. I had not expressed this to him. I had only said that he had no objection of using it as material for the purpose but he had wanted a copy for General Donovan's file.

Since it is material that is not for General Donovan's records, a copy of it is being sent to the Boston Series.

Horia Sima therefore, accompanied by General Stettincker, visited German Army Group South early in November, and left with General von Brodman, Chief of the General Staff and Colonel General Friessner, Commander in Chief of the Army Group. It was decided that a central command to coordinate all operations in Rumania would be set up, similar to the already existing national one. Individual operations were ruled out because of the need for reprisals. In the field of propaganda, it was felt that a Rumanian newspaper with a wide distribution over the entire Rumanian area was needed, and that the dropping of leaflets describing Russian atrocities might be effective. It was further intended to look for volunteers from among the 7,000 Rumanian prisoners held by the Germans, and those willing to do sabotage work and other front line duties would be retained by Army Group South. Efforts would also be made to take over the 4,000 Rumanian prisoners in Hungarian camps, permission for which it was felt could be obtained easily from the Hungarians through German efforts.

but the command of even the smallest unit was not in the hands of the Russians. Before the battle, the Russians had already made an earlier attempt during a battle when, in cooperation with the Germans, communication and supply lines with his army were cut off. It was felt therefore, that even if the Russians would not have the logistical situation.

A. Strategic Theater Operations

1. Indochina.

2. Japanese landings in the Philippines. Main attack against Mindanao expected from Cebu, Iloilo, and Zamboanga, with subsidiary attack from Manila.

Recent Japanese landings in the Philippines have been made difficult by the air superiority of the United States. Supply increase to Luzon of Palau turned out well. Declaration of war against U.S.A. and Britain by Philippines affords Japanese defense level. Also actual increase strength.

3. British attack against Burma expected strength perhaps 18 November. Main effort within enemy-held Burma will be nonconcentric land attack from East, North, and East with British, American, and Chinese units, but purely British landing force, publicly prepared, upon Andaman and Nicobar Islands, with Rangoon, Bangkok, and the Kra-Isthmus as ultimate goal. Army will also take into account precarious position Indo-China and Thailand, and count on Chinese cooperation in offense against Burma and later in attack on Canton. 5 to 7 divisions available for first wave for strengthening.

Re: Kappa.

Attached is an envelope containing two Viper Kappa. Two developed films, which I suggest you send to Washington, presumably via London.

I have called the two agents of this material to Washington and repeated certain of the points involved. Some of this material possibly would not be sent to my friends at Broadway, i.e., such items as the Swedish report criticizing the behavior of American troops in Italy, the Madrid message regarding the Civil Air Conference to be held in the U.S.A., and certain other items. It is for you to have someone who can sit down and carefully analyze all the material and decide what can properly go to Broadway. It might be best to send it all to Washington and let them decide there. I have not really had time carefully to analyze the material from this angle before getting it in the pouch.

It would be a comfort to have a telegram from you confirming the safe arrival of this material.

"Dear Doctor K:-

"Instead of travelling to Switzerland four weeks ago, I went to V - Supreme Headquarters. I have to represent a sick animal with either here. I would have preferred, in spite of this honorary assignment, to have kept myself completely in the background. I did go, none the less, in the assumption that I would see and hear a great deal that is now and interesting here. I did not deceive myself therein. The Supreme Headquarters is still at the old place in East Brussels. A large portion of the reports of our missions come directly here without touching the foreign office in Berlin.

"When you receive these lines I shall be, I hope, again in Berlin. Consider my being I remain there now ~~for~~ more important ~~things~~. Perhaps I shall be able in the near future to give you ~~you~~ a report. Would it not be possible for me to hear from you? It is uncertain whether and when I shall go again to Bern as a courier. Could I not once go to Switzerland illegally? Perhaps I could work a couple of days vacation. I have feigned illness here in order to get to Berlin. I have claimed to have stomach trouble and, as an overt indication thereof, ate nothing. That was no easy for me. Finally, however, I also deceived the doctor.

"I trust these lines find you in the best health. I often think about you and your family as well as of friends. Greet them all heartily from me. Under the changed circumstances, how does everything look in Switzerland? I sent to you, from Lisbon, a telegram about South America? (note for Mr. Dullis. The cable mentioned by Wood never reached me).

"Almost three more weeks have passed before I could bring these lines to an end. Happily I have been in Berlin since the 20th of September. To my great sorrow the hoped for courier opportunity for 21 September did not materialize. There will not be such an opportunity before October. I have hoped for a Russian visa. Otherwise everything was bound to be in vain. In the meantime you will have received the preliminary report so that these lines will find you not unprepared. But now I shall report to you on the business. At the Supreme Headquarters I saw and also spoke from time to time with the ambassadors Mackensen, Gieffert, Pappe, as well as the Ministers Koecher, Hoyningen-Huene, Gieffert, Gieffert, etc. Dieckhoff, Hoyningen-Huene and Koecher were recalled specifically at Hitler's wish. He is said no longer to wish to leave them at their posts. Result of July 20! In the meantime only Koecher has returned to Bern. Madrid and Lisbon will no longer be occupied. In general, the atmosphere in the Supreme Headquarters is decidedly improved. The continuing air attacks during the day impress them greatly. In addition to the military successes on land. But the Nazis simply do not want to hear about the future. As a result the pressure is undeniably strong. (continued below).

* At the Supreme Headquarters I also spoke with Mr. Klotz. He is Ministerial Director in the Eastern Ministry and was delegated by the highest quarters - definitely Ribbentrop or even Hitler - to go to Stockholm in order there to attempt (in the first half of September) to get into conversations with the Russians. The Russian Secretary of Embassy, Semenoff (?), Stockholm, waved away the suggestion. Nevertheless, it is still being attempted. The attempt is now being made through the Dunkwort of the German Legation in Stockholm. Koecher, also, when he was here, is said to have been asked if it were possible for him in Bern surreptitiously to be possible for him in Bern surreptitiously to with the Russians. He indicated he could not.

Klats is in his late forties, approximately 170 cm tall, of pale face, with dark hair and eyes and looks more like a European, with his long tapered fingers, particularly noticeable in his extreme nervousness.

Undoubtedly attempts are being made to sound out the Russians through the Japanese. Such attempts correspond with the intentions of the Japanese, who are getting ever bolder feet in the Far East and have recently suggested to Germany that the latter should and together with them in the Far East against England and the United States. The Japanese would, as already said, ~~some~~ negotiations between Russia and Germany. It seems to me doubtful that Oshima went to Moscow following his visit to the Supreme Headquarters in the middle of September, as he was not there at the moment. In any event, Hitler is said to have rejected the possibility of an understanding with Russia. He wanted concrete proposals.

In my opinion, the question is whether Russia is disposed to conclude a pact with Germany. (1. What would be the basis for such a pact? 2. Is Russia in a position to withstand American and English might on the land and in the air?)

The fact is, that in the middle of September, Oshima was called to the Supreme Headquarters to discuss the possibility of ^{three} having German submarines still in the Black Sea, which no longer had a haven. Oshima is said, through the Japanese Minister in Bern, to have asked the Turkish Government in our name whether the Turks would accept the submarines as a gift from us, which they could have if they would permit the crews of the three submarines to escape. At the same time, this question was broached to the Turks through the Hungarian Foreign Ministry, working in turn through the Hungarian Minister in Ankara. The matter was considered most urgent. The Turkish answer was received through the post and was negative.

In connection with the German-Russian peace feelers and the question of a rapprochement between Russia and Japan, which is a portion thereof, it is interesting to note a commentary which appeared in the Swedish press in the beginning of October, on a Pravda article in Japanese strategy was publicized and in which the contention was made that the Japanese situation against the United States and England was hopeless.

It is not clear just what the objective of the new line taken by the Pravda article is.

In view of the fact that the war situation is becoming constantly worse, the Nazis, following their old methods, are attempting to prevent the people from thinking and to bolster up their morale by pulling a new "movement" out of the hat. Armed resistance is planned when the foreign armies enter Germany. Hitler has already signed a decree to this effect, through which a "peoples army" is created, and is to be published in the near future. As in Italy, every German between the ages of 16 and 65 will be a member thereof. As in the Italian so-called "black brigades", the peoples army, under the leadership of well-known Nazis, should know that should they be taken prisoner, their lives are at an end. The Reichsleiter Bormann, as well as Himmler, or their respective designates, Oberführer Friedrichs, Obergruppenführer Berger, Gauleiter Bofinger, are charged with the organization of the Peoples army. Still to be elucidated by the Germans is the question whether some distinguishing designation of the members of the peoples army is to be made so that they will not be treated as freneticists but rather as combatants, as defined in the Geneva convention and, if they are so to be designated, how. It is necessary to wait and see how the broad masses in Germany will react to the peoples army.

"The time now appears to me ripe to initiate propaganda corresponding to this situation. Now, for example, the black brigade in Italy deserted; the impossibility, in any case, of a peoples army with light weapons fighting against a fully armed army with an air force, refused to recognize the peoples army, as Germany earlier refused to recognize the Soviets.

"There is great excitement here about the fact that the U.S. Military has issued marked notes at an exchange rate of ten marks to the dollar in that portion of Germany which the Americans have occupied. A decree is being prepared which forbids the acceptance of these marked notes. Although it is recognized that the Germans can be forced into difficult positions of accepting these marked notes for services or deliveries, those who take them under those circumstances can be punished with death if they pass them on to others. In cases in which such marked notes are found on American soldiers who are taken prisoner they will be treated and punished as though they were common counterfeiters. It is possible that this latter will not be published. I refer you in this connection to point 4 of the appended telegram from Sofia No. 122 of 30 August. The Lava notes printed by the Reich's printing office were definitely spurious bank notes. The Minister Beckerle is now in the hands of the Russians. Can something be done against him?

"In the meantime I have learned that Dr. Kastel did not go to Switzerland.

"Minister Jurszek is the man in the Hungarian cabinet who has been talking to us about everything, including the most secret economic place in the cabinet.

* Now, in great haste, one final word. Please open the film only in the dark room. I should very much have liked to have seen how the pictures turned out. Please give the personal snapshots to my colleague Hans Vogel, who will be at the Hotel Jura in Bern as courier on the 12th and 13th of October. Perhaps he could also bring word to me whether the other photographs worked out or not. He is bringing letter #2.

* I no longer have any ~~more~~ report. If I am needed more over there I shall come. I believe definitely that I could get in across the border west of Bodensee. I would come as Georg, naturally, so that I would not endanger my relatives here. How do you feel about this? Please answer, using the password, 'Reconciliation with my wife'. Tell Phil or ~~anyone~~ inform me by ^{Vogel} ~~air~~ is the man who developed the films reliable and since Kiep already has been executed and Plank, Professor Jordan and Minister Popitz will be executed this week.

I greet you in the greatest hurry.

GEORG.

tried informant, he has received other similar reports recently from other well-proven informants in the same strain, and background data to him in Bern supports his view.

He adds:

That his message should not be read as indicating that the morale of the Nazi army is nearing collapse (excepting probably the so-called Gross Deutscher, Slav and other non-German elements). Nor does he think that any important Nazi military officials are ready and willing to let us come in through the East unopposed. He believes, rather, that fierce opposition may be given to any invasion attempt. A collapse of Germany might follow, however, a few months after the establishment of a firm toe-hold in the West.

He concludes:

The timing of the invasion attempt may be all important. The German people are war-weary.

Because of the quality and amount of supporting material from very secret German sources and the international qualifications of our representatives in Berner, this is believed to be a most significant piece of intelligence.

Copies of this dispatch have been forwarded to the President, the Secretary of State, General Marshall and General Eisenhower and the Secretary, Joint Chiefs of Staff.

The enclosed material from Bern and the accompanying evaluation of its source should be of interest to your attention as early as possible.

You will recall earlier copies of a special character were secured from original official German sources through our Agency in Switzerland. This cable is not such a message but it is the evaluation by our principal Swiss intelligence representative of two hundred such enemy documents (four hundred pages) which have just come into his hands.

As is customary with material of such special character these enclosures are also being delivered personally to the Secretary of State, General Marshall, Admiral King, General Eisenhower and the Secretary

MEMORANDUM TO ACCOMPANY ATTACHED MESSAGE

With regard to the attached message which was sent Bern April 12th, the following is to be stated:

(1) The author of the message is an American citizen, 52 years old, in charge of secret intelligence in Switzerland since November 1942. His long-time knowledge of European politics dates back to 1917. During the last war he acted as an intelligence officer for the United States Government from the Legation in Switzerland. Subsequently, he represented the United States officially on several occasions in important diplomatic negotiations. During the last 30 years he has had a continuing expert and responsible interest in European affairs.

(2) All "Boston" (Kappa) material has been handled personally by him in Switzerland since it first appeared in October 1943.

(3) The sender of this message has hitherto acted merely as a reporter of material received by him, transmitting it as it reached him, and only occasionally making a brief note of comment on some point of fact or on some individual named in Boston.

(4) The previous situation, however, was not based directly on the author's conservative view of the German situation. To the possibility of an early German intervention.

(5) As a man experienced in the field, he knows not significant has attached himself to the responsibility he assumes by sending this message.

(6) However, in view of the very serious implications in this message, a cable has been sent to the author requesting him to review it carefully to see whether he wishes, on reflection, to modify any of its language and to report here by cable immediately.

(7) It would seem that the author, thanks to the sudden receipt of 400 pages of material all at one moment, finds himself in a position where he can see the whole picture rather than any single part. He is probably better able to see and evaluate that whole picture than the Germans are themselves, since they have neither the time nor the calm nor the undistracted minds to take an overall view of their own diplomatic situation.

(8) You will be further informed when and if any modification of this message comes from Bern.

In October 1943, the Russian Aviation Division (AVD) of the General Staff of the Red Army, under the leadership of General V. V. Shukhov, issued a report on the state of the Soviet Air Force. The report stated that the Soviet Air Force was in a state of rapid development and was capable of meeting the demands of the war.

The report also stated that the Soviet Air Force was capable of meeting the demands of the war. The report stated that the Soviet Air Force was in a state of rapid development and was capable of meeting the demands of the war.

The basic reason for this is the fact that the Soviet Air Force has been able to maintain a high level of readiness and combat effectiveness throughout the war. This is due to the fact that the Soviet Air Force has been able to maintain a high level of readiness and combat effectiveness throughout the war. This is due to the fact that the Soviet Air Force has been able to maintain a high level of readiness and combat effectiveness throughout the war.

over the years. In 1943, while the Soviet Union was bearing the brunt of the fighting, the United States gave the Soviet Union the Lend-Lease program. The Soviet Union was the only country in the world that was not a member of the United Nations at the time. The United States was the only country in the world that was not a member of the United Nations at the time. The United States was the only country in the world that was not a member of the United Nations at the time.

In the attack on Berlin during the winter of 1945, the forces were underestimated by the German High Command. The German High Command was particularly mistaken in its estimate of the Soviet forces behind the front line. The result was that the Soviet forces were able to breakthrough in a number of places. The probability that the German High Command can be misled on the middle and lower echelons is not very great.

CONFIDENTIAL REPORTS FROM BRASIL - 89.

Rio de Janeiro - July 9, 1941

Of potential importation is the visit of President Vargas to Paraguay and Bolivia. The announcement of the official visit to return the official visit made recently to Brazil by Paraguayan representatives, the President first having in mind to visit only Paraguay. Later it was decided that he was to visit both Paraguay and Bolivia - his itinerary taking him to the frontier of Mato Grosso state. The visit is a step to Argentina for the purpose of the defense of continental defense. This is a well-known fact, but it is nevertheless the opinion of some that it is a well-known fact that Argentina is played at the arrangement under the terms of the Rio de Janeiro Convention for Paraguay in products. The whole matter really goes back to the first International American Convention in 1901 when the subject of a railroad to connect the River Paraguay with Santa Cruz de la Sierra was proposed. However, nothing was done. In 1902, when the Treaty of Petropolis was signed giving the new territory to Brazil against an indemnification to Bolivia of $1,000,000, it was stipulated that this sum should be devoted to the construction of a railroad connecting Corumbá in the Brazilian state of Mato Grosso with Santa Cruz in Bolivia. As a matter of fact, the Petropolis treaty did not specify any particular route and in view of the fact that at that time of rubber it was agreed that the so-called Madeira-Mamoré R.R. be constructed. This, however, lagged. In 1928 another treaty was concluded, definitely specifying the construction of the Corumbá-Santa Cruz R.R. It was agreed that if the construction cost more than $1,000,000, the additional disbursement would be considered a loan by Brazil to Bolivia, repaid in money or crude petroleum. Brazil was given the right to explore the Bolivian oil fields, the oil to be used to meet the needs of the two countries and the surplus, if any, to be available for export. The railroad, of which about 100 kilometers are practically finished, will be 660 kilometers in length and the work was intended to be completed by the end of 1942. War conditions and the resulting difficulty of obtaining material may delay the completion. As a part of the general plan, and in order to encourage the diversion of Bolivian products to Santos, this port was made a free port for that country's products and this privilege was also extended to Paraguay. When the road is in operation it is assumed that the two countries will take advantage of the new arrangement which will mean a great reduction in the traffic that now passes Buenos Aires. All these points will be discussed by President Vargas during his present trip. There really is therefore considerable at stake in the President's visit.

With all the discussion concerning Western Hemisphere defense plans it might not be amiss to take a look at the distribution of some of the foreign races in South America. The Japanese, for instance. In the state of São Paulo there are 175,000 Japanese; in

On July 27 General Góes, Chief of Staff of the Brazilian Army, returned to Rio de Janeiro from Buenos Aires where he had attended the time and day conference of that country. In his return the general, such as far as is known by steamer but changed to a train and finished his journey at São Paulo. It was rumored that this change was made in order to avoid a cold or even influenza epidemic at the house in Rio de Janeiro. The General had been booked in a hotel and there was a possibility that some of the German agents might find that his pleasure at his supposed German embassy. The Chief of Staff was of course repeatedly stated in recent weeks that he is not a Nazi but many perhaps think that this is really his service. Very likely he is a opportunist and would be found on the right side in case of trouble.

Some Brazilian Army officers are of the opinion that trouble is brewing and that Hitler's extra-de-facto pro-Nazi officers in key positions. They cite Lt. Col. Affonso de Barros, commander of the Santa Cruz Fort, Capt. Moacyr de Alim, commander of the Iguaçu Fort and Lt. Col. Alves Pastos, commander of the Imbuicaba Fort, insisting that they are pro-Nazi and perhaps anti-Portuguese but there really is no proof that either of them. The charges are incorrect. The incident is mentioned merely to show that there is a feeling that strong pro-Nazi elements are to be found in the Army. Persons of our believe that these reports are much exaggerated.

The Condor Aviation Co. recently petitioned the government for permission to take aerial photographs along certain routes in Rio Paulo, but the request was denied on the ground that while the company was a Brazilian one by so far as legal organization was concerned, it did contain alien elements. Some time ago the L.A.T.I. (the Italian airline) had asked the government for full plans of all the landing fields, but this was not granted. The L.A.T.I. had likewise requested permission to station a ship along its transatlantic route somewhere in the neighborhood of Fernando de Noronha, but this also was not allowed. These requests were all so obvious that one wonders why they were made in the first place.

A memorandum has been signed between the Portuguese and Brazilian authorities providing for two commissions who will take up certain questions regarding cultural and economic relations. The commissions will begin work on November 15 of this year and are to report by January 31, 1942. The commissions will have to solve three problems: (1) concession of certain facilities to improve navigation between the two countries; (2) making a postal accord similar to the present Pan American Postal Union, and (3) the establishment of a free port at Lisbon for Brazilian merchandise.

Of potential importance is the visit of President Vargas to Paraguay and Bolivia. The announced purpose of the trip is to return the official visit made recently to Brazil by Paraguayan representatives, the President first having in mind to visit only Paraguay. Later it was decided that since the Bolivian capital is on his itinerary taking him to the frontier of Mato Grosso with Bolivia—he might well include La Paz in his route. Some interpret the visit as a slap to Argentina for its lukewarm attitude in the program of continental defense. This is a bit far-fetched, but it is nevertheless the opinion of some. It is also said that Argentina is piqued at the arrangement under the terms of which Santos has a free port for Paraguayan products. The whole question really goes back to the first International American Convention in 1890 when the project of a railroad to connect the River Paraguay with Santa Cruz de la Sierra was proposed. However, nothing was done. In 1903 when the Treaty of Petropolis was signed giving the Acre Territory to Brazil against an indemnization to Bolivia of $1,000,000, it was stipulated that this sum should be devoted to the construction of a railroad connecting Corumba in the Brazilian state of Mato Grosso with Santa Cruz in Bolivia.  but for the adjoining countries such as Chile, Peru, Ecuador, Colombia and Venezuela. Even in the case of the northern border of Brazil least 150,000 potential migrants--they could all be potential disturbances in the various areas. The figures mentioned in the official sources, such as that the numbers are much greater. Brazil, for example, is credited with 20,000 to 35,000 Japanese, but Major H. H. the former American Military Attaché at Rio de Janeiro, states that the actual number is between 40,000 and 60,000. This difference exists in the other localities as well.

Japanese immigration started in Sao Paulo somewhere about 1910--perhaps a bit earlier--when an agreement was made to bring in 1,000 Japanese per month to work on the coffee fazendas. Later was increased to 2,500 per month and continued officially at that for many years until Dr. Miguel Couto, a member of the then Congress in 1935, put through the 2% limitation on immigration kinds. But there was and probably still is a heavy illegal influx into Brazil, especially in the Amazon valley, via Peru. At one time

We must, therefore, expect that some of these poor defenceless patients will sooner or later be killed. Why? Not because they have committed any crime deserving of death, not because they have killed one of their wardens or nurses in such a manner as to warrant a legitimate self defence might be for the wardens or nurses by using violence against them.

On July 6th the enemy tried to destroy the town of Muenster by terrific night air attacks; since then the Gestapo has started to confiscate monasteries, convents and religious institutions in favour of the Gauleitung. The inhabitants - innocent men and women, honorable members of German families whose relatives are soldiers fighting for Germany - are robbed of their home and their property, thrown into the street and banished from their native provinces." I asked the Fuehrer and Reichskanzler in the interest of justice and unity of the home front for protection of liberty and property of Germans against the arbitrary interference of the Gestapo and the plunder of the whole country. I have sent similar requests to the Reichsstatthalter for Prussia, Reichsmarschal Goebbels, Reichsminister (Home Secretary) Reichsminister (Church Affairs) and, finally, to the High Command of the Wehrmacht (Army). I am sure that, if not the feeling for justice, at least the knowledge of the importance of the unity of the home front would move those authorities to stop the Gestapo in its action against our brethren and sisters and that they would not refuse chivalrous protection to innocent German women.

IT WAS IN VAIN.

The action was continued, and what I predicted a long time ago and what I mentioned last Sunday, has now happened. We are standing before the ruins of the people's unity, which has been recklessly smashed in these days. I have most urgently drawn the attention of the Regierungspraesident (head of Provincial Administration), of the Minister, and of the High Command of the Wehrmacht to the acts of violence against innocent German men, to the cruelty against helpless German women which defies all chivalry and which can only arise from a deep hatred of the Christian religion and the Catholic Church. These acts of violence have the effect of sabotage of the people's solidarity. There is no community of feeling and thinking possible between myself and those men (and all those who have any responsibility for it) who, without legal justification, without judicial inquiry, without even legal defence, and without judgment, hunt down the members of our orders like helpless quarry (Math. 18, 17). I shall not hate them; I wish, from the bottom of my heart, that they would become wise and mend their ways. Likewise, I have sent a prayer of intercession to

God for the soul of Minister Aldersbach, who died suddenly on July 5th. He was a Catholic priest of the Archdiocese of Munich who had for years, without permission and against the will of his bishop, been an official of the Reichsministerium for German affairs. He often drew up and signed documents for Heinrich Himmler, which infringed the rights and abused the dignity of the Church. Now he has apparently lost his life while boating on the Inn River. He was drowned in the current. God be merciful to his poor soul. In the same way we want to say the prayers that the Saviour said for those who nailed Him to the Cross, for all who persecuted and slandered us; but as long as they do not change, as long as they continue to wrong the innocent, to drive them out of the country, or put them in prison, so long I shall refuse to be in any community with them. The community spirit and the common aim of our people has been destroyed beyond repair, against our will and in spite of our warnings. I cannot imagine that our townsmen with their old tradition, our peasants, artisans and workmen and our women, I cannot imagine that your fathers, brothers and sons, who are now risking their lives on the front for Germany, will have any spiritual community with the persecutors of the members of our orders. We shall be obedient as far as they are entitled to give us orders as representatives of the legitimate government, but there is no spiritual community possible, no feeling of an internal relationship imaginable with those persecutors of the church, with those intruders in the convents, with those tormentors who chase helpless women and children coming from our best families, our sisters, out of their ecclesiastical homes, where they have prayed and worked for the good of our people for centuries.

I should be ashamed before God and before you, before

Liken your home, your love and your faithfulness, your exemplary Christian life with a firm and unshakeable anvil, which intercepts the strength of the hostile blows. This anvil must support the tender strength of the young people. It must fortify their resolve will not to be deflected from their way towards God.

It may be necessary, particularly during the war, to impose strong supervision and state planning, requisitioning of goods and forced management in national economy on production as well as on consumption; but who would not gladly put up with this out of love for our people and country. But this planned economy means a dependency of every individual on many persons and functionalities. If these persons are representatives of anti-Christian philosophy (Weltanschauung) and if they try to convert those who depend on them to their philosophy, the freedom and independence of conviction might be imperiled. This danger to independence is still stronger in the case of officials. What courage is necessary if they profess publicly to be real Christians and prove themselves as true Catholics in spite of all pressure.

Just now we are the anvil and not the hammer. Be strong, firm and unshakeable like the anvil against all blows, serving most faithfully your people and country; be ready at the same time for the greatest sacrifices according to the words of the Apostle, "You must obey God - not man! Through our conscience, formed by our creed, God speaks to everyone of us. Always obey the voice of your conscience." Take as an example the Prussian minister of justice of a former time, whom I have mentioned once before and whom Frederick the Great asked to change a justly pronounced sentence of a court according to his own desire.

This true nobleman, whose name was von Muenchausen, gave ...

first persecution of Christians. "Be humble under God's almighty hand, then He will lift you in the right hour. Throw all your sorrows on Him, be sober and watchful, because your enemy Satan is plotting about like a lion roaring for his quarry. Be faithful by being loyal to your faith! The God of mercy, who has called on you through Jesus Christ to join Him in glory after a short time on earth, will aid you, strengthen you and make you firm. To Him belongs the honour and glory from enough, and that Germany would be defeated either by disintegration from within, or by the long hand of the blockade. They, therefore, settled down to a "phony war" in which confidence in the Anglo-French Line and the British Navy.

The peace offensive was renewed in October 1939, when the Fuhrer offered peace to Great Britain and France on the basis of their recognition that all European Affairs east of the Rhine should be settled by Germany and Russia. No territorial demands were made on France, and only the return of the former German colonies was asked of Britain. Moreover, Hitler renewed his pledges to respect the independence of Switzerland, the Low Countries, Scandinavia, Yugo-Slavia, and Hungary.

It was intimated unofficially that the German Government would wait ten days for a reply, and the offer was repeated by Hitler on October 10th, 1939, at the Sportspalast. But before the time limit had expired, Mr. Chamberlain (on October 12th) and M. Daladier (on October 7th) had made it known that no peace could be envisaged as long as Hitler did not propose to restore the independence of Poland and Czechoslovakia. It may be noted that at this moment the "No peace with Hitler" theory had not made its appearance.

The autumn peace offensive was, therefore, considered a failure, and the Fuhrer closed this phase on November 8th at Munich with the words: "What now remains to be said ~~will be~~ addressed to the British in a language they ~~can~~ understand." But the period of "phony war" continued until April, 1940, when the sudden ...

sudden attack on Norway precluded the sweep into the Low Countries, the collapse of France, and the evacuation of the B.E.F.

The success of the Western Blitzkrieg and the elimination of France as a military factor in the war, brought Herr Hitler squarely up against that ancient divided attitude towards England which has characterized his whole outlook since the days of Mein Kampf. A curious ambivalence of thought has made him desire to be at the same time both Britain's lover and her destroyer, and the strategic position of the German armies in July 1940, forced him to take a decision in favour of one or other of these roles.

It is to be believed that he genuinely hoped that Britain, in realization of her exposed and vulnerable position, would yield without further struggle. It seemed inconceivable that, alone, without allies, with her army dispersed in disorder, and without equipment, Britain would do other than come to terms, and Hitler undoubtedly hoped that he could by a single stroke, bring the war to a rapid conclusion, and satisfy, at least partially, both his psychological urges toward Britain.

In his speech to the Reichstag on July 19th, Hitler seemed to be waiting, almost impatiently, for a sign of British capitulation. His tone was one of warning and yet of realization of the magnitude of the challenge if Britain should by some miracle continue the struggle. "Mr. Churchill ought, perhaps, for once, to believe me when I prophesy that a great Empire will be destroyed; an Empire which it never was my intention...

intention to destroy, or even to harm." But he added in a moment of clear vision "I do, however, realize that this great struggle, if it continues, can only end with the complete annihilation of one or other of the two adversaries."

Britain's refusal to respond to this form of peace offensive, and her determination to prosecute the war with every fibre and sinew of her being, compelled Hitler to extend his war effort indefinitely. In a desperate effort to bring the war to a speedy end, he launched the Luftwaffe against Britain, and when that assault failed he abandoned also the direct technique of peace offensive.

(N.B. - From the facts at present available, it is impossible to say at this stage whether the Hess affair was designed as a peace offensive. It can, however, be said that in a sense, whether intended as such or not, it had much of the effect of one, since by reason of the secrecy with which it was handled, the suspicion of Britain in the United States was greatly increased.)

III.

The new phase of the war which began with the close of the Battle of Britain in September 1940, presented Hitler with two alternative policies. The struggle had now largely developed into a duel between Britain and the Reich, and the Fuhrer could either propose a peace which would be acceptable to his adversary, or devise some means of destroying her. Rebuffed on the first score, he essayed the second, and for the period of a year no peace offensive, direct or indirect, was attempted.

Now, however, there are indications of a return to the use of this weapon. The occasion is the new turn taken in the Russian campaign.

 If, having captured Moscow, Hitler had been able to disengage himself from the Russian adventure, and give the German people a sufficiently convincing picture of apparent gains and successes, there is good reason to believe that he could have taken the opportunity to "freeze" Europe into the pattern of the New Order. He would, it is thought, have convened the second Congress of Vienna and summoned to it only the thirteen contracting parties of the anti-Comintern Pact, but also the puppet regimes of the occupied States, including France and even Russia, and the four remaining neutrals - Sweden, Switzerland, Portugal and Turkey.

To them would have been presented the new Statute of Europe, and their acceptance is a foregone conclusion.

It is more than possible that Hitler would have then declared the war at an end so far as he and the Continent of Europe were concerned, and in preparation for this he coined the special phrase of "the Fortress of Europe", which is being repeated ever since in all channels of propaganda. He would also have announced that he would only bomb Britain in reprisal for a contribution of the R.A.F. operations and he might even have suggested the suspension of the blockades by both sides.

But this form of peace offensive was still-born. Not only did Moscow not fall, but the Soviet armies wrested the initiative from the Nazis, and assumed the offensive. Concurrently with this there grew up a new line of peace offensive propaganda in America.

From certain quarters there came a ~~constant~~ whisper that the German Army, ~~it could not win the war~~, would not be defeated on land, and that, therefore, the Verloo incident, for example, have not been forgotten. - It is possible that the next party have now in preparation a "phony" telephone peace offer to be carried out by certain generals, notably Jodet and Helldorff who have sold out to the Party. These officers having been personally groomed and selected for the role of "moderates" and would stage a coup as a result of which Hitler might "retire" to Bergholz, and certain other leaders might also disappear. A certain amount of blood purging of the Party would also take place to add verisimilitude.

The Generals might then add to themselves certain conservative moderate elements such as Schacht, Neurath and Schwerin von Krosigk, and make the Allies a peace offer involving the evacuation of all western, central and south-eastern Europe, in exchange for the retention of Poland, and a free hand with Russia.

The danger to Europe of Russian conquest of Germany would be used as a trump card.

The important aspect of both these variations of the theme of a Reichswehr coup lies not so much in the question as to whether the coup is "phony" or genuine, but in the fact that no matter if it is a feint or not, the policy of such a coup would be entirely consistent with the long range policy pursued by the German General Staff since its inception in 1809, when, after the crushing defeat of the Prussian armies at the hands of Napoleon, Scharnhorst and Gneisenau began to rebuild the military machine. They were determined that it should remain the main-spring and ultimate repository of power in Prussia. It was for this reason that they took immediate steps to capture the nebulous and "woolly" patriotism generated by the activities of the Tugendbund, convinced that true patriotism could only be expressed through the medium of militarism.

The dangers of this political theory were recognized by their great civilian contemporary, Baron von Stein, who wrote in warning: "We shall wait in vain for the awakening in our country of that public spirit which the English and the French and other peoples possess. If we do not imitate them in setting for our military leaders certain bounds and limitations which they must not disregard."

But Stein's warning went unheeded, and his predictions were fulfilled. The power of the military machine grew with the expansion of Prussia and Germany. Held in check temporarily by Bismarck, it waxed strong under his successors, and reached its apogee under the rule of Germany by the Hindenburg-Ludendorff condominium of 1916-1918.

This latter period offers a very cogent example of the military machine as a "peace-maker." The Treaty of Brest-Litovsk, dictated at the command of the General Staff, deprived Russia of 34% of her population, 32% of her agricultural land, 85% of her beet-sugar land, 54% of her industrial undertakings and 89% of her coal mines. In addition she was forced to agree to pay 6,000,000,000 marks in goods, bonds and gold, on which she actually made gold payments of 120,000,000 rubles. This was the treaty which was described by the Army controlled German press as one of "understanding and conciliation," and to which Hitler himself referred in Mein Kampf as one of "positively boundless humanity."

The policies of Scharnhorst and Gneisenau went down to eclipse but not destruction in the debacle of 1918.

But in addition to this major peace-propaganda offensive, there are at least two others in operation, both of which are directly traceable to German radio propaganda.

The first of these was the rumour widely purveyed, that Germany and Russia may conclude a separate peace. The objectives of this attack are obvious. It is an attempt to capitalize on the deep-seated distrust and abhorrence of Bolshevik Russia in certain British and American circles - a factor which has become exacerbated by the refusal of the Kremlin to declare war on Japan - and at the same time to terrorize Britain into suing for peace under the threat of a liquidation of the war in the East, and the consequent freeing of Germany's hands to concentrate her war effort elsewhere. In addition, of course, there is the remote hope that this note might conceivably strike a resonant chord within the Soviet Union itself.

The second rumour campaign relates to the possibility of a separate peace between Japan and China. Such an achievement has long been the ambition of Nazi diplomacy. It was attempted abortively in 1939, by the German Ambassador at Nanking, Dr. Oscar Trautmann, and doubtless hopes were again raised by the recent publication on November 29th, 1941, of General Chiang Kai-Shek's communication to President Roosevelt forewarning of the possible necessity of reaching an agreement with Japan under certain circumstances.

In all these matters the importance and the dangers lie not so much in the chances of success of these various forms of peace offensives, as the effect which they may have in threatening national unity within the several Allied States, and in sowing discord among the Allies themselves.

"Give me Allies to fight against" said Talleyrand, and this is as true today in the perils as it was a hundred years ago. There is much strength in a Grand Alliance, but there are also many weaknesses, for which the closest watch must be kept. Not the least of these is that of suspicion of intention, and it is this chink in the armour which the enemy will endeavour to reach with his propaganda.

Within America itself the peace offensive technique may afford a source of serious threat to national unity and war effort. The Isolationists have made great play with their gestures of accepting the leadership of the President in the present national emergency. This is but a cover for the activities which they are carrying on underground. They have abandoned no whit of their opposition to the Roosevelt policy of assisting Great Britain, and refuse to regard themselves at war with Germany and Italy. There is no total war but merely a translation into belligerent terms of their inherently parochial outlook on national interests.

Today they lie quiet, but if there should arise in America a wave of depression due to heavy casualties and severe reverses in the Pacific, they will reappear with a policy which will demand that pressure be brought upon Britain to negotiate a peace with Germany, and thus free America's hands to defeat Japan. Should this coincide with, or provoke, a peace offensive
